London, April 9 .- If anything was want ing to onfirm the European belief that the Cuban risis has realled an imparafrom which there is no issue but war or the hauling down of the Spanish flag, I has been found in President McKinley report to the ambassadorial note presented in Washington on Thursday last, so strongly re-asserting the determination that there is only one way to prevent the United tSates intervening to end the terrible situation. As a matter of fact, no confirmation was wanted, for Europe's only real hope of a peaceful solution of the question was based on the baltef that when they realized the futility of the highstrung sair about their honor the Spanjards would accept the alternative and surrynder. The ambassadorial appeal at Washington was regarded as an obvious formality. The British official view of the master is, as the Associated Press has already sot forth, that the occasion was one for the sole exercise of American discretion, and that the American actitude toward Cuba is the same as any other civilized and self-respecting government would hold under aimilar circumstances. Practically the whole of this country
